Ziff Energy Report:

North American Power Generation Forecast to 2017

Ziff Energy announces the release of a report assessing North American Power Generation to 2017 on both a regional and State/Provincial level.

“Government indecision on long-term CO<sub>2</sub> policy has stalled the near-term development of new coal-fired power stations” concludes Cameron Gingrich, Manager, Gas Services, and lead author. “Political leadership would allow industry to anticipate costs and could allow coal generating capacity to increase. Lacking clear CO<sub>2</sub> guidelines, natural gas-fired generation will serve as the de facto bridge fuel to a possible nuclear power renaissance post 2017.”
